

BUILD A SUCCESSFUL WORLDWIDE WELLBEING AT WORK STRATEGY

INVITATION

June 23

from 10 am to 12 am (CET)

100% online event – in english

Register now

The Covid crisis, which has affected all five continents, has made psychological health at work a global concern for companies. Recent figures and studies show how mental health and psychosocial risks are strongly impacting the workplace. More aware than ever of the need to protect their employees, companies with a multinational scope are willing to implement, within their HR global policies, worldwide well-being programmes.

What is the current situation regarding the impact of psychological health on companies at a European and International level? How does it impact companies worldwide? What does a global well-being at work programme consist in? How can it be carried out? What are the key success factors?

To find out, join our online event bringing together expert opinions and clients feedback.

PROGRAMME

Introduction

David Mahé – President of Human & Work

Mental health at work

An international overview on reality, stakes and prevention strategies

Patrick Légeron, MD

Psychiatrist, Founder of Stimulus

Post-doctoral Fellow of the UCLA

Teacher at SciencesPo Paris and at the University of Geneva

Coauthor of reports on Psychosocial risks at work for the French Ministry of Labour and on burnout for the French Academy of Medicine.

Implementing your global workplace wellbeing programme

Christine Loos - Director of International Strategy at Stimulus

Feedback from international clients

About Stimulus

Founded in 1989, Stimulus supports more than 1300 clients and delivers services in 113 countries across the globe through an international network of experts. We provide a local response adapted to each context and culture, as close as possible to your employees, wherever they may be: psychological health policies at work and prevention of psychosocial risks, quantitative or qualitative assessments and diagnoses, training for employees, managers and executives, Employee Assistance Programmes (EAP), management and prevention of critical incidents, etc.

For more information, contact our Global Network team :

globalnetwork@stimulus-conseil.com